Global Supply Chain Issues in Health Care

Time: 14th June 2024 (EDT: 9:00 AM, CET 3:00 PM, CST 9:00 PM)

The pandemic has disrupted the healthcare supply chain management and created a ripple effect on a global level. Healthcare supply chain is an extensive network of individuals, organizations, resources and processes that collectively ensure healthcare supplies and medicines are manufactured, distributed, and provided to patients. Any disruptions in the supply chain can lead to increased costs, patient outcomes, and service efficiency. The debate on how to increase the resilience of supply chains in clinical laboratories has gained new momentum after the COVID-19 pandemic. Product shortages due to sudden increase in demand and logistical challenges during the pandemic have forced clinical laboratories to revise their supply chain strategies. Here in, we will discuss the role of supply chain in health care, the disruption and effects of shortages and strategies to mitigate supply chain risks in the context of clinical laboratory management.
